

Un niño tendrá la habilidad o la práctica necesaria para recortar, trazar líneas, escribir o dibujar, cuando haya adquirido la coordinación fina que se requiere entre la vista y la mano. Sus ojos deben poder seguir en forma simultánea la dirección que lleva la mano en el movimiento que realiza. Esta coordinación se afina con diferentes ejercicios, entre ellos los de trazos insistentes como los presentados en estos cuadernos en grado ascendente de dificultad, trazos que le permitirán en un momento dado, realizar los pequeños movimientos que se precisan para —entre otras cosas— escribir.

El primer trazo en estos ejercicios consiste en repasar el patrón impreso, con un marcador grueso. Posteriormente, usando marcadores más finos y de diferentes colores, insistir sobre el mismo ejercicio, en los espacios intermedios como se indica en las ilustraciones (tomadas de los 3 cuadernos que forman parte de esta serie).

BEATRIZ RODRIGUEZ G.

6

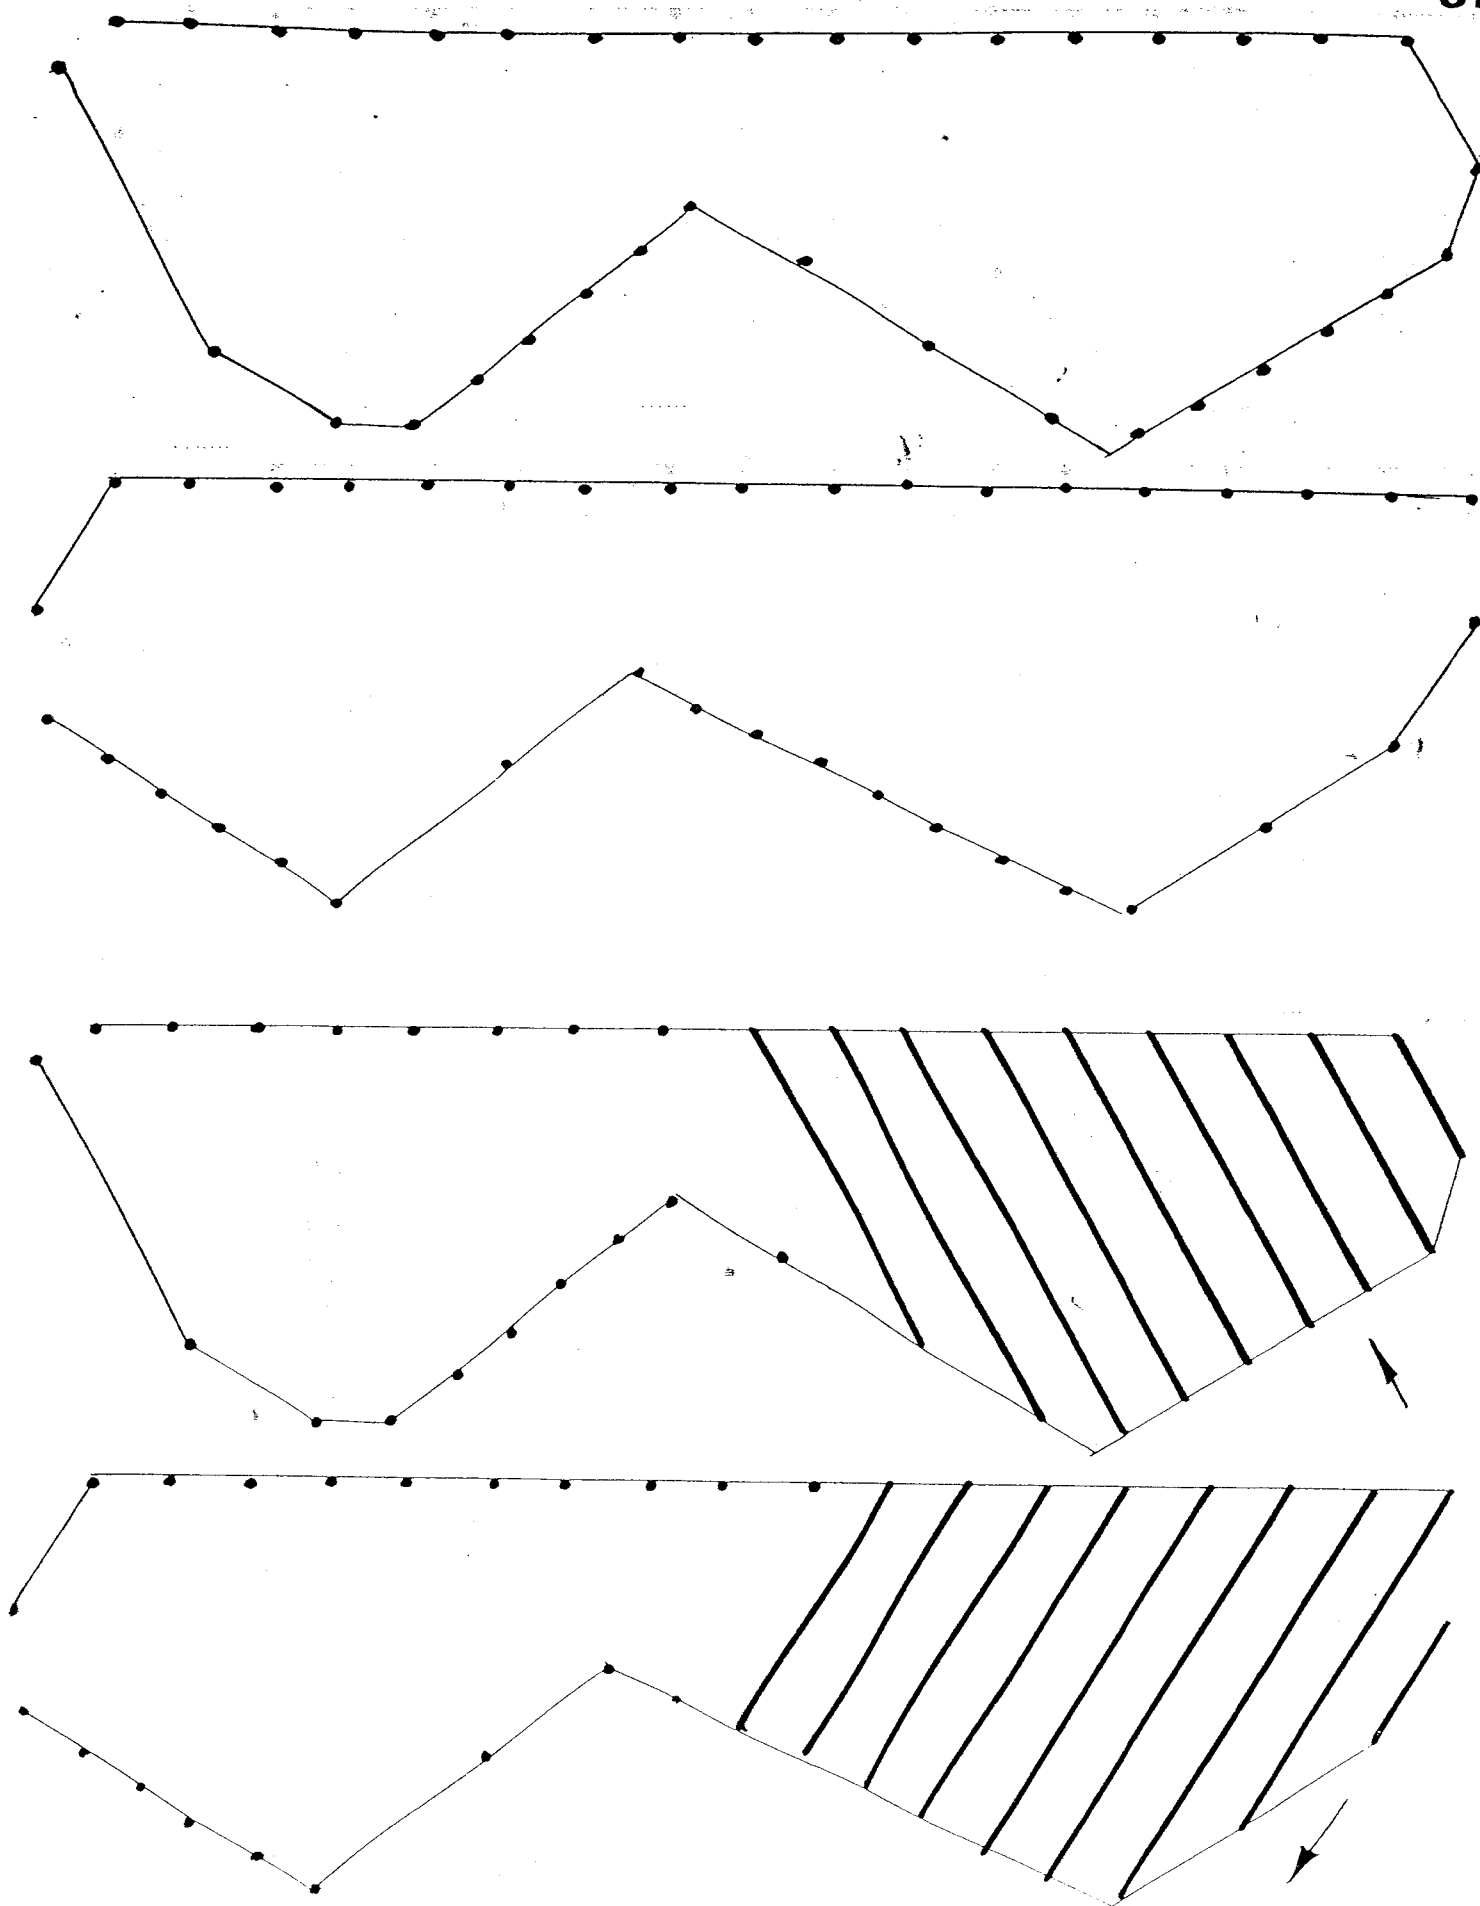

Handwritten cursive script, likely a stylized representation of the word "JUNIOR", written across the bottom of the page. The letters are connected and feature loops and flourishes. The final letter 'R' includes a small arrow indicating the direction of the stroke.

ر ر ر ر ر ر ر

→

